TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Single copy, one year in advance, $2 50
Cubes of seven, 15 00

It is intended to make the SHELBY SENTINEL a first-class Family Newspaper, independent of sect or party, devoted to General News, Literature, and Morality. Appreciating the necessity for a Superior Newspaper in this part of Kentucky, we will bend every energy to make the SENTINEL acceptable to all classes. To those who will be a welcome guest, and the angry mutterings of discord will be welcomed, as the endeavor to heal the frightful wounds, which years of war have caused. To sustain our paper, we naturally expect the assistance and co-operation of the people of Shelby. While the local interests of this section will not be neglected, we will aim to advance the general prosperity of the State.

The general interests and welfare of the country can in no way be advanced than through the medium of a newspaper.

Devoting our attention to all topics of the day, we will freely and independently discuss them. To prevent any misapprehension as to the position which the SENTINEL will occupy, we will state that our approval and support will be given to a mild and conciliatory policy, condemning all radical, revolutionary or unjust measures. Believing that this is the only course which will result in permanent prosperity to the country and these views are such as the people of Kentucky sincerely and heartily endorse, we shall uphold and defend them at all times. Firm in the opinion that we can make our paper acceptable, we ask a liberal patronage.

MACK-A-CHECK.

Original Poetry.

For the Shelby Sentinel.

FAREWELL.

Inscribed to the students of 1859, at El Dorado College, Hardin county, Ky.

"Sad are the moments that severe.

The tie to the spirit most dear;

Their memory shall linger forever,

To avert the sigh and the tear.

The sunbeam all vainly is shining,

All vainly do music and song.

Now chide my fond heart for repining,

As on the breeze they float along:

With the friends of my boyhood I dwell;

Their memory shall linger forever,

Farewell, the garden of light,

Thee dear would appear the green bower,

Where lately it found its delight;

Even like that poor bird of the wildwood.

I turn, with strange sadness and tear,

From this beautiful Eden of childhood,

To the world so deceitful and drear.

Though parents and friends fondly cherished,

Shall solace my grief with their love,

I'll mourn for the hopes that have perished;

And often, in spirit, I'll rove

To the scenes of life's earliest pleasures,

When joyous and free from all care,

I dwelt amid sweetest of treasures,

Of sciences and piety there.

Farewell, cherishest scenes of my childhood,

Farewell to the forest and the glade;

Farewell to the grot and the wildwood,

And to shades under which I have played.

Farewell to the birds and the bowers,

Farewell to the blossoming lea;

Farewell to the shrines and the flowers,

That bloom there, schoolmates, for thee.

TURNING THE TABLES.

Philemon Hayes and Fanny Ray had been just three weeks married.

They sat at breakfast in their cozy dining-room one fine morning in Summer, totally infatuated with each other. Never such happiness as theirs before! The felicity of Adam and his lady before they made the acquaintance of the serpent, was not to be mentioned in the same breath.

They kissed each other between every cup of coffee, and made a practice of embracing at least twice—sometimes thrice—during every meal. Just now, they were speaking of disagreements. Some friends of theirs had fallen out and refused to fall in again.

The State Sunday School Convention.

That our State is beginning to appreciate the position which she should occupy, is a thought worthy of attention, and should encourage us, as Kentuckians, to feel a noble pride in her welfare and prosperity. We are truly glad to see Colleges and High Schools abounding in every part of the State, and conducted by men of culture and ability. But while our educational advantages are improving, it is also a source of just and honorable pride that the morals of the young are cared for, and watched with zealous energy. Sad indeed is the history of that people who educate the mind alone, while the heart is left to riot in degradation and wickedness. The importance of Sunday School instruction can not be over-estimated. The influence of impressions which are formed in childhood, like kind words and good deeds, never die. It was a wise conclusion to which the friends of morality came, when they resolved to hold a State Convention of all those interested in the cause of religious instruction. That the Convention would prove a success, no one could doubt, who knew the originators of the movement. They were men who "knew no such word as fail." The first State Sunday School Convention met in the city of Louisville on Wednesday, October 17th. Delegates were in attendance from the various denominations of christians, representing all religious beliefs and coming from all parts of the Commonwealth. Hon. W. F. Bullock, of Louisville, was elected temporary Chairman, and, in a touching manner, showed that he well appreciated the importance of the great work which was being begun. The Convention was organized by making Hon. Jas. Lithgow, Mayor of the city of Louisville, permanent President of the Convention. Thus two gentlemen who are well-known as leaders of opinion in public life have added the weight of their influence to this good work. After several days spent in profitable discussion, the First State Sunday School Convention adjourned.

News Summary.

Large corn crop this year—1,039,000,000 bushels.

In New York during the last six months there were 169 suicides.

There are said to be thirty thousand lawyers in the United States.

Minnie, daughter of Gen. Tom Thumb, died in England last month.

The Rinderpest killed nearly one-twentieth of all the cattle in Great Britain.

St. Louis was visited by a terrific whirlwind last Sunday. Hundreds of buildings were unroofed and injured.

C. H. W. Bent was killed in Nashville last Monday, by Hugh McGavoch. Great excitement was created, as it was a case of cold-blooded murder.

Maximilian has gone from Mexico and Princess Carlotta has gone crazy.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Kentucky, is now in session at Louisville.

The Bardstown Banner has suspended.

The Shelby Sentinel will shortly be enlarged.

Maryland is in a state of feverish excitement. The political troubles threaten war in that State.

Hon. Charles Sumner is married.

A TRAGEDY.—Benjamin Warfield, a wealthy and prominent citizen of Lexington, was shot and killed in that city, on last Wednesday by Horace Armant. The latter was wounded.

MORE SHOOTING.—A negro boy, named Sam Rogers, was shot by a man named James Wilson, in Mt. Sterling, on Thursday of last week. Wilson was tried before Judge Garret on Friday morning, and was held to bail in the sum of $600 for his appearance at the next term of the Montgomery Circuit Court. Wilson formerly belonged to the Sixteenth Kentucky volunteers.

POISONED.—A little daughter of Mr. Fesler, of Montgomery county, Ky., was poisoned on Wednesday last by eating bread on which strychnine had been put for the purpose of killing rats. As soon as the child showed symptoms of poison, Mr. Fesler immediately took her to Mt. Sterling, and summoned all the physicians in town; but it was too late, and the child died.

One of our exchange papers, in speaking of the high duties placed by Congress on paper and printing materials, says the duty of thirty-five per cent. on printing paper renders it cheaper to send a book over to England to be printed and bound and then bring it back again, than to get it up here. Books and newspapers cost double what they would but for the duty imposed by Congress.

SCRAPS FROM MY PORTFOLIO.

The Discoverable.

BY "QUILL."

Man is never satisfied with his present knowledge. He is ever seeking to improve upon what has gone before. He is ever trying to discover, and penetrate the hidden secrets that lie within the boundary of the region of exhaustless wonders, called the Great-Beyond. This has always been his disposition, and we may infer from the structure of his mind, that it will so continue to be. This desire to pierce through the mysterious veil of nature, to investigate and discover, is a trait of character that belongs to man alone of all of God's created beings, and from it has resulted many of the greatest blessings now enjoyed by our race. How much more can still be done; how many fresh truths will be opened up; how many guiding lights, science will yet be able to place along the vast extended vista of knowledge, depends upon the extent to which the human mind can be expanded and enlarged. If this is the true criterion, we can hope for still greater triumphs of intellect than have yet adorned the past; for we know that the facilities of the mind, like the muscles of the body, grow in size and strength as they are used and exercised. As man seeks to gain knowledge, he finds his thirst for it growing with each step he takes. Success in one undertaking but impels him to attempt another; and as he reasons, and searches, he finds that his mental powers become so strong that he is able to comprehend and fathom questions which before seemed destined to remain forever dark and forever unexplained.

If we would form some feeble idea of the extent of the vast field still unexplored, we should look at what has already been done by investigation. Since Caesar landed upon the hostile coast of Britian, the Printing press has waked a slumbering world; the telescope has swept the broad expanse above us; a new continent has been discovered, and its long-unused wealth and resources opened up; Astronomy, Chemistry, Zoology, and Geology have taken their proper position among the sciences; the world has sprung, like the Phoenix from its ashes, under the guidance of such men as Newton, Watts, Hugh Miller, and Arkwright. Steam is our servant: lightning our messenger: coal our torch on the earth above, while the glimmer of the safety-lamp, is the beacon of hope to the toiling miner; far down below the busy scenes of upper-life. The markets of the world are teeming with new and strange articles of trade; the sails of Commerce have been expanded; the plough has been sharpened; the wheels of manufactures have acquired new velocity; subtle streams of life, long obstructed, are now flowing through every vein and artery of human industry; a mighty revolution has been worked than man had ever pictured in his wildest dreams; and the scientific world of to-day, is not the world of a few hundred years ago.

If you then consider all this, where will you set the limits of mental advancement? Will you say that the boundary of the Discoverable has now been attained? that all, that is to be disclosed, has been disclosed, and that there remains no more grand principles, or wonderful secrets, to be penetrated by the clear and far-reaching reason of another Newton? Have all the truths respecting our own natures; all the laws of mind and matter, all within and without, that man is to know, been reached and comprehended; and must we henceforth be satisfied with what we now possess, and no further attempt to explore the field of knowledge? Such a sentiment is only entertained by one whose narrow vision cannot take in the grandeur of the universe, and the dignity of man. We would tell such an one to compare the past with the present, if he would form some idea of the future; he will find that that science which in its infancy was only used by the superstitious, as a pretended means of foretelling wars, pestilence and famine, is now another lever of power to man, and a light to revelation. He will see that that science which, in times gone by, was only valued as an instrument, to skillfully conceal a crime, and by which designing Monks terrified rebellious heretics, now makes fertile the worn-out soil; strengthens the arm of the mechanist, and detects the murderer by the faded blood-stains of a rusty blade.

We are living now, it may be, close upon the borders of grand principles, laws and elements which are only waiting for a master-mind to divine their hiding-place, and a master-hand to draw them forth, before the astonished world. Can we not reasonably suppose, that if laws which remained unknown for ages were at last detected, others yet remain? If the life-current of man himself could continue to ebb and flow, and so continue to keep up his very existence, and yet not be known through unnumbered generations, may we not with truth conjecture, that many even of the most familiar objects around us possess qualities and powers great and wonderful, which, when they do become known, will strike mankind with surprise, that they could have so long lain dormant, and misunderstood.

As new laws are brought to light concerning the mysterious connection between the mind and the body, who will say how far medical science will advance? As shaft after shaft is sunk in this exhaustless mine, how far will education progress, and to what an exalted position will man be able to attain? Why should we consider steam the last great motive-power discoverable, and capable of being applied to the arts of life? Some mightier power may yet be sleeping, like a caged lion, in the vast prison-house of nature. The time may yet come, when the mythological air-voyage of Daedalus will become an event of daily occurrence, and while some new force is moving the ships, cars, and engines below, swift craft, propelled by some now unknown agent, may fly through the rifted clouds above. This is an age of practical philosophy. The more learned theories, splendid dreams, and ingenious speculations of ancient philosophers, are now in disrepute, and "utility" is the watch-word of modern philosophy. He is the Plato now, the fruits of whose labors are seen not in dusty volumes of airy schemes—"In wandering mazes lost,—while everlasting dictates crowd his tongue, powerless grave or positively wrong,"—but in drawing out, and making useful to man the unknown virtues of the material world around us, and, like Franklin, is a Prometheus, in fact and not in fancy.

The work is going bravely on. Patient and watchful laborers are in the vineyard, and their toil will yet be rewarded with more glorious results than have ever yet been attained. Great draughts have been taken from the fountain, but it cannot be exhausted. Well could England's greatest investigator say, that he had only gathered a few shells on the shore of the great ocean of knowledge: for he was only a creature, looking into the works of the Creator; he was finite, trying to pierce the infinite. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive," even the extent of this ocean, much less the priceless pearls, concealed in its depths. We will only realize its grandeur when we cease "to look through a glass darkly, and see face to face."

Mortal man cannot conceive of the glory of the Discoverable, for "now, we know only in part, but when that which is perfect has come, we will know even as we are known."

Famine in India.

There are sights to be witnessed in Calcutta which would lead the stranger to believe that the city was perishing of famine and pestilence. Since the famine has been allowed to attain such hideous proportions in the rural districts it is inundating the capital. All who can crawl from the interior, from the afflicted subdivision of Jethabaud, in the rich country of Hooghly, and the misery of what was once the flourishing indigo district of Nuddea, as well as from the more wretched Midnapore and distant Orissa, flock to the charities of Calcutta. They would receive food in their own homes, but they hear that they will get more in Calcutta, and clothes as well, and so at the present moment no less than two hundred and fifty famine stricken wretches a day seek the unnochters, or Bengalese feeding houses of the native quarters of Calcutta. So late as the 9th of July last the Bengal government a second time refused to encourage the formation of a public relief committee, and soon retired again to the hills.

But the city was being so crowded with paupers, a pestilence was so imminent that the municipal commissioner, Mr. Stuart Hogg and one or two merchants organized a committee, and on Monday last a public meeting of all classes was held in the town hall to raise subscriptions. Judges, merchants, barristers, chaplains and zemindars urged the claims of the starving, and eulogized the charity of the native gentlemen, who had already done so much, with an eloquence hardly required, but quite justified.

Official reports were read, giving statistics which, completed to date, show that at twenty-two places 17,475 poor are daily fed, in addition to the sick in the hospitals, and as this number is increasing by about two hundred and fifty a day, it may be said that 20,000 starvings are now in Calcutta. A sum of £150,000 is required to grapple with the misery, and of this, within four days of the meeting being held, more than one-half has been subscribed.

GRAND CHAPTER OF KENTUCKY.—The following officers were elected on Tuesday: Grand High Priest; J. H. Braham, Owensboro.

Deputy Grand High Priest; I. T. Martin Cynthiana.

Grand King; R. G. Hawkins, Louisville.

Grand Scribe; E. B. Jones, Paducah.

Grand Secretary; Phil. Swigert, Frankfort.

Grand Treasurer; A. G. Hodges, Frankfort.

Grand Chaplain; R. C. Gardner, Harrodsburg.

Grand Captain of Host; Henry Bostwick, Covington.

Grand Captain of Guard; Geo. Wood Merrivether, Christiansburg.

Grand Tyler; R. C. Mathews, Louisville.

THE INDICTMENT FOR TREASON AGAINST HON. J. F. BULLIT, IN THE UNITED STATES COURT AT LOUISVILLE, WAS QUASHED SATURDAY, THE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY ENTERING Nolle Prosequi, AND HE HAS RETURNED TO HIS HOME.

JUDGE BULLIT IS ONE OF THE ABLEST, AND WHAT IS A MATTER FAR MORE RARE, IS AN HONEST LAWYER.

THE NEWS OF HIS RETURN TO KENTUCKY WILL BE A MATTER OF GREAT GRATIFICATION TO HUNDREDS OF OUR READERS, FOR HE WAS DRIVEN INTO EXILE BY UNJUST PERSECUTION FOR HIS POLITICAL OPINIONS.

KENTUCKY NEEDS THE SERVICES OF ALL HER SONS OF THE CHARACTER OF JUDGE BULLIT, AND SHE WILL CALL FOR THEM IN due season.—Kentucky Gazette.

A Valuable Store House and Residence,

Local Items.

Krueger & Crapster have just received two thousand dollars worth of new stock.

We wish to secure the services of several young men of energy and reliability, in a business that will pay. Apply for particulars personally or by letter to this office.

A Fulks, the Eccentric has left at our office several copies of his Missalies. We will take pleasure in disposing of them to those who wish some rich reading.

THE NATIONAL INTELLIGENCER.—This able and venerable journal, published at Washington City, is one of our most welcome exchanges. May its years be doubled and its usefulness extended.

W. S. Caldwell has a full and complete Stock of Gentleman's Furnishing Goods, to which we call the attention of our readers. See advertisement, and give him a call.

With pleasure we refer our readers to the Law Card of J. D. Harrington Esq., Louisville Ky. and recommend him to litigants. We are gratified to learn that he is commanding a good practice in Louisville.

WILDER'S STOMACH BITTERS.—Those who suffer the various ills to which humanity is heir, should read the conspicuous advertisement of Edward Wilder. Mr. Wilder has considerable reputation as a druggist and being a home chemist deserves consideration.

The merchants of Louisville advertise liberally in three daily English papers and two German papers of that city, and then are able to advertise in various good papers in the State—such as the Sentinel and others. This is right, but some of our merchants would do well to follow the good example set them.

MURDER.—The body of a negro man was found last week, covered up with leaves and stones in the woods near Boston, in Jefferson county, Ky. The presumption is that he was murdered, there being a gun or pistol shot wound through his head. An inquest was held, but no other information elicited.

MULDOON BULLETT & CO.—In view of the fact that there is so much inferior work, which is imposed upon our people for Italian Marble, we caution our friends against agents who are throning the country, and would advise all who want Monuments, Tablets, Tombstones &c. to call at the Marble Works of Muldoon Bullett & Co., Louisville Ky. See advertisement.

After issuing the Sentinel last week we took a hasty trip to Louisville. We had the pleasure of meeting many old Shelby friends and others, and found some new ones. Our stay in the city was rendered not only pleasant, but profitable by the efforts of kind friends. We are now at our post, and feel better after a pleasant visit to Kentucky's great commercial emporium.

THORNTON & ROGERS, LOUISVILLE, KY.—Ladies of Shelby, Henry, Spencer, Oldham and elsewhere, accept the advice of the Sentinel, and call upon two of the nicest business men in Louisville, and supply yourselves with all those indispensable articles which ladies must have, and which Thornton & Rogers keep in profusion, such as Laces, Embroideries, Hosiery Fancy Goods &c. Don't forget the place, No. 120 Fourth street between Market and Jefferson.

TRADE PALACE.—We call especial attention to the advertisement of this large Louisville establishment. The lady readers of the Sentinel are advised to go to the Trade Palace, for a good assortment of Dry goods. During our recent visit to the city, we had the pleasure of glancing at the large stock of goods displayed, and with eyes dazzled with the richness and splendor of the costly array, we determined to advise our lady friends to call at the establishment and see the charming variety. The gentlemanly proprietors take pleasure in showing the beautiful fabrics, which they are selling off as fast as with their numerous clerks force they can dispose of them. Ladies, the Trade Palace is the place. See advertisement.

THE ILLUSTRATED ANNUAL OF PHRENOLOGY AND PHYSIOGNOMY FOR 1867.—Just Published, Contains—How to Study Phrenology; Names of the Faculties; Hindoo Heads and Characters; Fat Folks and Lean Folks; Immortality—Scientific Proofs; Thomas Carlyle, the Author; The Jew—Racial Peculiarities; Civilization and Beauty; The Hottentot; A Bad Head; Forming Societies; Matrimonial Mistakes; Handwriting; How to Conduct Public Meetings; Eliza Cook, the Poetess; Rev. James Martineau, the Preacher; Rev. Dr. Pusey, the Author; Froude, the Historian; Thiers, the French Statesman; John Ruskin, the Art-Writer; Rev. Charles Kingsley, the Author; Bashfulness—Diffidence—Timidity; Causes and Cures; Eminent American Clergymen; The Spiritual and Physical; Large Eyes; Ira Aldridge, the Tragedian; Influence of Marriage on Morals; Society Classified, etc. A capital thing, full of Portraits and many other Illustrations. THE POOR PRINTER.—“I pity the printer,” said my uncle Toby. “He’s a poor creature,” rejoined Trim. “How so?” said my uncle. “Because in the first place,” continued the Corporal, looking fully upon my uncle, “because he must endeavor to please everybody. In the negligence of a moment, perhaps, a small paragraph pops upon him; he hastily throws it to the compositor; it is inserted; and he is ruined to all intents and purposes.” “Too much the case, Trim,” said my uncle, with a deep sigh; “too much the case.” “And please your honor,” continued Trim, elevating his voice and striking into an imploring attitude, “this is not the whole.” “Go on Trim,” said my uncle, feebly. “The printer sometimes hits upon a piece that pleases him mightily, and he thinks it cannot but go down with his subscribers. But alas! sir, who can calculate the human mind? He inserts it, and it is all over with him. They forgive others, but they cannot forgive a printer. He has a host to print for, and every one sets up for a critic. The pretty Miss exclaims, ‘Why don’t we give us more poetry, marriages, and bon mots, away with these stale pieces?’ The politician claps his spurs on his nose, and reads it over in search of a violent incentive. He finds none, takes his spurs off, folds them, and sticks them in his pocket, deeming the paper good for nothing but to burn: so it goes. Every one thinks it ought to be printed expressly for himself; as he is a subscriber; and yet, after all this complaining, would you believe it, sir,” said the Corporal, clapping his hands beseethingly, “would you believe it, sir, there are some subscribers who do not hesitate to cheat the printer out of his pay? Our army swore terribly in Flanders, but they never did anything so bad as that!” “Never!” said my uncle Toby, emphatically. “Never!”

Guardianship of the Negro Race.

The following, from the Augusta Georgia Constitutional, is in point:—“Recognizing that the negro is not the author of that freedom that is hurrying him to the grave, mindful of his good behavior even in the midst of all the tumults of war, still clinging to that old feeling of patronage that once made the black man the happiest peasant in the world; ready to give him full equality in the eye of the law, and yet bountiful to him out of deeply impaired resources; the people of this Southern country stand out as a people inaccessible to passion and animated towards the helpless race among them with even a more kindly sentiment, if anything, than of yore. A riot here or there—in Memphis or New Orleans—does not militate against these assertions; for outbreaks are sporadic everywhere—as witness the ‘loyal’ mob of New York, who nangled the blacks to the lamp-posts—and in them the inferior blood must ever go to the wall. And to more, even, than to the negroe’s present, does this honorable care extend. The churches are as open to them now as they ever were, and we know personally of Sunday Schools in which they are endeavored to be taught the way to the good Hereafter. At the bar of the Great Eternal the South can stand this day, ever unsputted with any valid charge, and in this belief, for which we have essayed to give some humble reason, we close as we began, by saying that the best friend the freed men has on earth is the Southern man.”

A HEART-RENDING EPISODE.—The London Morning Herald’s military correspondent gives the following story:—“A farmer, living in a hamlet near Possnitz, had a wife and two children, and such was the woman’s terror of the Prussians, when she heard they were coming, that her husband, to satisfy her, placed her in an underground cellar, with her two little ones, and built up the doorway, leaving some food inside. The Prussians entered the place, and, among others, obliged this poor man to accompany them, with his horse and cart, for a day’s journey, as they said. But the man was brought on from place to place, and at last, when he was suffered to return, and reached his own house, several days had elapsed. On the way back he began to calculate how little food had been left with the wife and children; and, horror-stricken at the dreadful thought that their cries might not be heard, his hair is said to have turned white on his homeward journey. His fears were too real. He tore down the masonry, searched for those so dear to him, but only found three lifeless bodies, half devoured by rats. Reason left him at the dreadful sight, and he is in the hospital—a lunatic.”

DIRECTIONS FOR SPORTSMEN.—As the sporting season is now in full blast, the following suggestions from an exchange will not be considered out of place by the fraternity:

To break a dog, take a clothes line of the ordinary length, tie it around his collar and attach the other end to a patent windlass under your arm. When a bird is flushed shoot at, and, killed or missed, wind him in to charge. If after trying the rope and windlass, the dog proves incorrigible, and you cannot break him, break his neck. To ascertain if your gun is loaded, put your foot on the hammer and blow the muzzle letting the hammer slip from under the foot and descend with smart force on the nipple. If the gun is loaded you will be notified of the fact.

When two birds get together, and you miss both, left and right, while the dog, it has good effect.

Take a string that will reach twice around the neck of a young lady; let her hold the ends in her mouth; then if the noose will slip over her head to the back of her neck, it is a certain indication that she is married, or wants to be.

Ben. Butler signifies his willingness to run for Congress. Of course he will say an exchange. With the pay at fifty-five dollars a day, it is almost as profitable as stealing spoons.

“Sam,” said a mother to her very obedient son one day, “how many logs have you sawed, eh?” “Why, mom, when I gets this ‘un and three others saw’d, I’ll have four.”

Wit and Humor.

The Chili question—“How’s your cold?” What is the worst seat a man can sit on? Self-conceit.

A warning needed at all fashionable assemblies. Look out for paint.

New axiom—A thorn in the bush is worth two in the hand.

A spendthrift’s purse, like an uneasy thunder cloud, is always lightning.

When is it useless to try to borrow a book? When it is Lent.

In female schools the demand is for principals—not men.

Madame de Stael says: “Architecture is frozen music.”

A dog that watches his chance to steal a bite, is the worst kind of a watch-dog.

Why is the rinderpest like a mouse? Because the cat’ll catch it.

What is the worst kind of sympathy? To be pitted by the small pox.

The dew that falls upon the flowers dearest to us is the bitter dew of tears.

Why is John Bigger’s boy larger than his father? Because he is a little Bigger.

Be temperate in diet. Our first parents ate themselves out of house and home.

A coquette is said to be a perfect incarnation of Cupid, as she keeps her beau in quiver.

An Irishman who had just landed in this country said: The first bit of meat I ever ate was a roasted potato, boiled yesterday, and if you do not believe it, I can show it you, for I have it in my pocket now.

A Philadelphia clergyman, in the course of his sermon, recently remarked: “You need not clasp your hands so fervently in prayer that you cant get them open when the contribution box comes around.”

I never go to church,” said a country tradesman to his parish clergyman.

“I always spend Sunday in settling accounts.” The minister immediately replied: “You will find the Day of Judgment will be spent in the same manner.”

A WONDERFUL ANIMAL.—A Western paper publishes the following notice:

“Lost or strade from the scriber a sheep

all over white—one leg was black and half his body—all persons shall receive five dollars to bring him. He was a she goat.”

An old lady who insisted on her minister’s praying for rain, had her cabbages cut up by a hail storm, and on viewing the week remarked, that she never knew him undertake anything without overdoing the matter.

A Newport Jenkins talks of a lady with a “canopy of hair as luxuriant as a Brazilian forest.” Brazilian forests are celebrated for the extensive assortment of animals which inhabit them. The lady will not feel flattered by the insinuation conveyed about her hair.

A man in Tennessee killed his dog for barking at old dirty-stoekings Brownlow. The Rome (Geo.) Courier says it is a wonder the dog didn’t die when Old Browny first looked at him. Probably the reason was they were both mangy curs of the same litter.

“First class in mechanics, stand up. How many kinds of wheels are there?” “Please, sir, I know—three kinds.” “What are they?” “Carriage wheels, cane wheels, and wheel cutlets.” “Smart boy! Go to your seat; and we will see if you can discover the connection between broad birch and long division.”

OUT OF SEASON.—A day or two since, two ladies from the country, on a shopping excursion to the city dropped into a hardware store, where agricultural implements are sold. They had read John’s advertisement, and therefore innocently inquired for cradles. The storekeeper said it was rather late in the season for the article, and he had sold all he purchased. The ladies looked at each other wonderingly, and whispered, laughingly, when one turning to the blushing John, remarked: “Out of season! I thought cradles were always in season.”—New Bedford Mercury.

ACCOMMODATING HIMSELF TO CIRCUMSTANCES.—The Richmond correspondent of the Danville Register tells the following anecdote about Gen. “Alleghany” Johnston, on the march to Bristoe Station in the fall of 1863. The General was riding along the road, and perceiving one of his men up a persimmon tree, hallowed out to him:

“I say there, what are you doing up there? Why ain’t you with your regiment?”

“I’m gettin’ simmons, I am,” replied the soldier.

“Pessimons, thunder! They are not ripe yet. They are not fit to eat.”

“Yes, but, General,” persisted the Con-fed. “I am trying to draw my stomach up to suit the size of my rations. If it stays like it is now I shall starve.”

The General had nothing further to say, but rode on.

JOSH BILLINGS.—If a man wants tew at his aktual dimenshuns, let him visit a grave-yard.

If enny man wants to be an olde bachelor, and git sick at a boarding tavern, and have a back room in the 4th story, and have a red-haired chambermaid tew bring hiz water gruel tew him in a tin basin, I have alwus sed, and I stick tew it yet, he haz got a perfek rite tew dew it.

Owing tew the hi price and grate skarste of veal in Nu-York sitty, meny ov the fust families are using artifishal calves, They say it helps tew finish out a leg or mutt fast rate.

It iz getting so now-a-daze, if a man can’t cheat in suu way he ain’t happy.

Success in life iz very apt tew make us forget the time when we wasn’t much. It iz so with the frog on the jump; he can’t remember when he was a tadpole—but other folks kan.

CUSTOM MADE WORK.—An individual, tew a fine gentleman, haz either got tew be born soot he brought up tew it from infancy; he kant learn suddenly eny more than he kan learn to tork injun correctly by praktsising on a tommy-hawk.

“Sam,” said a mother to her very obedient son one day, “how many logs have you sawed, eh?” “Why, mom, when I gets this ‘un and three others saw’d, I’ll have four.”
